SUBJECT: BURMA: FOOD PRICES DROPPING, FUEL COSTS BACK TO NORMAL

Ref: A) Rangoon 398 B) Rangoon 368 C) Rangoon 390

RANGOON 00000401 001.2 OF 002

1. (SBU) Summary. Two weeks after Cyclone Nargis devastated Burma, food prices have begun to drop, although most prices remain higher than pre-cyclone levels. While certain food items - rice, cooking oil, and chicken - remain scarce, prices of these prices have dropped slightly in the past few days. Prices of other key commodities, including pork, potatoes, onions, salt, and bottled water, have dropped substantially now that more of these products are available in local markets. Fuel prices have returned to pre-cyclone levels; petrol now costs 4,500 kyat a gallon and diesel costs 5,500 kyat a gallon. Decreased demand and increased supply of fuel account for the decrease in price. End Summary.

Same Demand, Greater Supply

2. (SBU) During trips to various markets around Rangoon during the past few days, we observed vendors selling a wide variety of food, much of which was imported from Northern Burma. Vendors told us they received increased supplies of many food products, including onions, potatoes, and pork, in the past few days due to improved supply lines. As a result, prices of these products have decreased, although they remain higher than pre-cyclone levels (Ref B). On May 18, onions sold for 500 kyat ($0.45) per viss (3.6 lbs), a 37.5 percent decrease from May 12 prices of 800 kyat ($0.72) per viss. Salt prices also decreased by 42 percent, down from 2800 kyat ($2.54) a viss to 1600 kyat ($1.45) a viss on May 18. Supplies of pork were also readily available, reducing the price per viss from 8,000 kyat ($7.27) to 6,500 kyat ($5.90).

3. (SBU) Rice prices are still high due to limited supply. However, we observed a slight reduction in both the price of ehmata rice (25 percent broken rice) and inferior rice since May 12. On May 18, one bag of ehmata rice (69 lbs) sold for 43,200 kyat ($39), an 8 percent price reduction. Inferior rice sold for 21,600 kyat ($19.50) a bag, down from 24,000 kyat ($21.81) last week. Prices of chicken, beef, fish, and cooking oil remained the same.

¶4. (SBU) During the past week, supermarkets, such as City Mart and Asia Light, have begun to restock their shelves with new products. City Mart Managing Director Win Win Tint told us that many companies have slowly received the shipments that were delayed by the storm. Not all the products were the same, she stated, but supermarkets now could import goods such as cooking oil, noodles, butter, and cheese.

Win Win Tint admitted that prices in City Mart were higher, around 10-20 percent depending on the product, due to higher shipping and transport costs. As things return to normal, she said, prices should return to pre-cyclone levels.

Fuel Prices Return to "Normal"

¶5. (SBU) During the past few days, the black market price of fuel has dropped, returning to pre-cyclone levels. On May 18, the price of gas per gallon was 4,500 kyat ($4), down from 5,000 kyat per gallon on May 12. Similarly, diesel prices per gallon dropped by 8 percent, from 6,000 kyat ($5.45) per gallon on May 12 to 5,500 kyat ($5) per gallon on May 18. We also observed fewer cars queuing at gas stations around town, with the average wait time decreasing to approximately half an hour or less. Gas stations still restrict car owners to no more than six gallons of gas at one time, and only 14 gallons per week.

¶6. (SBU) According to economic contacts, fuel prices have returned to "normal" because of a significant drop in demand. As the GOB restores electricity to more townships in Rangoon, fewer homes and businesses have to rely on diesel generators for electricity (Ref C), increasing the available supply of diesel on the market. Additionally, private businesses continue to bring in an average of three diesel shipments of 10,000 gallons each per week and at least one petrol shipment, both of which are sold on the local markets.

Comment

¶7. (SBU) A steady, albeit limited, supply of food entering Rangoon's markets, has allowed prices to fall. Several of Burma's ports have resumed limited operations, enabling approximately ten ships a day to deliver imported goods. As the situation in Rangoon improves, additional ways to transport food into the city will develop, reducing market pressure and increasing the supply of available commodities. Fuel prices have already returned to pre-cyclone levels; it is only a matter of time before food prices do the same.
